

My broadband service, provided by Comcast Communications, is nearly always excellent, and I have no complaint about the service. As a consumer, however, I have neither any insight from Comcast's filings as to whether the monthly fee is a legitimate rate to cover their costs plus a reasonable profit, or represents price gouging. Like most cable companies, they are a monopoly. I would advocate regulation that required competition in all urban areas, at least, for cable services.